MR. COMSTOCK'S WORK.

A Church Sexton and Three Photogra; bers who Deal in Forbidden Literature.

The efforts of Mr. Anthony Comstock to suppress obscene literature and pictures were yesterday rewarded by four important arrests and the capture of a wheelbarrow load of stuff. Mr. Comstock had spotted Z. M. Caille, a Frenchman, who had a photograph stand at 622 Broadway, and who also peddled photographs throughout the city. Mr. Comstock professed a desire to buy an assortment of pictures, and, on the pretence of examining the peddler's wares of that nature, invited him into a restaurant at 4 Clinton place. Caille accepted the invitation, and after his customer had bought one of the fitther to this The efforts of Mr. Anthony Comstock to Information obtained from Callle, and purchases made the day before by Mr. Comstock, were made the basis of an application to Justice Kiloreth for warrants for the arrest of Peter F. Weill and John Cassebaum, photographers (the latter a clerk), who operate at 685 Broadway. The warrants were granted, and 259 obscene pictures and 209 negatives for printing were sezzed. The officers next went to 312 East Forty-seventh street, and arrested Matthias Ziegler, who is said to be assistant sexton of the Church of 81. Boniface, at Forty-seventh street and Scoond avenue. Vance & Co. Refusing to Vote. At the meeting of the Common Council yesterday a resolution was offered protesting against the reduction of the laborers' wages. Seventeen Aldermen voted in the affirmative, Aldermen Billings and Howland voted in the negative, and Alderman Vance declined to vote. President Lewis having decided that the resolution was adopted, it was moved that Alderman Vance be compelled to vote. Alderman Billings raised the point of order that the question having been decided, the motion was out of order. President Lewis ruled that the point of order was not well taken. Thereupon Alderman order was not well taken. Thereupon Alderman Deane appealed from the decision of the Chair, but the Fresident was sustained. Then, on motion of Alderman Purroy, the vote by which the resolution was passed was reconsidered. The question was again put, and each of the seven Republicans, as his name was called, declined to vote. Thereupon Alderman Relify moved that they be put in contempt. The motion having been carried, President Lewis declared that they could not yot on any question until they ing been carried. President Lewis declared that they could not vote on any question until they had purged themselves of the contempt.

A communication from the Mayor, nominating Patrick G. Duffy for the vacant Police Justiceship, baving been read, Aiderman Lysaght moved that the nomination be confirmed. In calling the roll, the Clerk omitted the names of the seven Aidermen who had been put in contempt. Aiderman Deane demanded that his name should be called. President Lewis decided that he could not vote until he had purged himself of contempt, and added that Mr. Duffy having received thirteen votes, was confirmed. The seven Republicans thereupon quit their seats, and the board adjourned.

SIXTY-THREE LIVES LOST

SINKING OF THE STEAMER VICKS-

Unsuccessful Launching of the Bonts-Terrible Suffering of the Five Survivors-The Actual Loss of Life Estimated at 102. Yesterday morning the steamer State of Georgia of the State Line arrived from Glasgow, having on board five sattors who were picked up at sea in an almost exhausted condition last been salling through the floe ice all the preced-ing day, and was in latitude 46° 34' north, longitude 47° 58' west, when a boat was sighted on the port bow, with some sail set. Two hours had seen some boat spars and new deals drift-ing by, and he surmised that a ship had foundered at no great distance. The supposition was correct, for the five men rescued from the boat were survivors, and probably the only ones, of the steamer Vicksburg of the Dominion on the 27th of May, commanded by Capt. Bennett. The rescued men were James Crowley, the boatswain's mate; Thomas O'Brien, Patrick Grogan, John Williams, and Jonas Wilkinson, seamen. None of the men were more than twenty-five years of age, and Williams and nineteen. Their feet and legs had been frozen, and were so swollen that the men could not stand, and the only article of food in the boat, however, she sailed direct to Glasgow, with a crew of sixty-two, all told, thirty-seven steerage and eight cabin passengers, besides a stewardess. In the steerage there were some women and children, and of the eight cabin passengers there were three ladies. For the first three days the weather was fine and tolerably warm, very little ice being sighted; but at half past nine on sunday evening a high sea was running, the cold grew more and more intense, and field ice began to accumulate round the ship so fast that beadway became impossible. Finally the ship was hove to, and at daybreak much of the ice seemed to have drifted past her, and the sea was tolerably clear. Once more the Vicksburg got under way, and steamed cautiously on her course; but the ice soon began to drift down upon her again, and on Monday night she was completely surrounded. At half past nine sail was shortered, and heading his vessel to the southward Capt. Beneet, putting on a full head of steam, endeavored to get clear of the ice, which now threatened to destroy the Vicksburg and all on board. Rapid headway, however, soon became impossible, and shortly after midnight, while forcing her way along at half speed, the ship struck heavily on a block of ice.

He summoned all hands to the quarter deck and told them they need have no apprehensions, as he could take his vessel to St. John's, Newfoundland. While he was yet speaking to them a discovery was made that at once put an end to all hope of bringing the Vicksburg into port anywhere. The waier had risen so high that, the Bres under the boilers were extinguished. Then the Captain gave the order for each crew to stand by its boat, and in a few minutes the men were at their stations waiting for the order to lower. Several times Cipt. Bennett called out to them to bear in mind that St. John's, Newfoundland, was 120 miles to the northwest.

Boat No. I was the first cleared, Crowley, the boatswain's mate, and Thos. O'Brien, the seamon, were in her as shewas lowered; but hardly had she begun to descend when the stern tackle parted and she hung from the bow. It was intended that most of the women should have gone in this boat, and blankets and mattresses had been provided for their accommodation. These were all thrown out, as well as the watches, chronometers, and other instruments that had been placed in the boat. Before anything could be done the bow tackle gave way, and the boat fell into the sea stern foremost. She righted herself in a few seconds, and rose fliled with water, which Crowley and O'Brien began to bail out with buckets which were floating alongside the ship. About half the water had been thrown out when Wilkinson, Williams, and Grogan jumped in. The sea was then very high, and the five men cast off, they say, to prevent the boat being swamped by the rolling of the ship. They continued to bail out the water, and write thus employed diffed about a Bundred and fifty yards away. They say they seaw the second officer's boat safely lowered, and after receiving nine persons she was pulled to windward about sixty yards. Mr. Parish expected to have enough men enter to start the shaft, but he could not get them, and the shaft remains idle.

AN ENGLISH PACHT SEISED.

A Little Craft that the Wicers of the Revenue Service than was being Pitted Out for a New Expension to Caban Waters.

Collector Arthur was informed by the United States District Attorney on Wednesday afternoon that the steam yacht Octavia was preparing to sail from New York with an armed expedition for Cuba, and he was requested to prevent the vessel from sailing. Being a pleasure craft it was thought that her owners did not intend to take out a clearance certificate at the Custom House, as do merchant vessels, but intended to sail without it. Deputy Surveyor Sharpe and a detachment of inspectors were instructed to prevent the yacht's departure.

Sharpe and a detachment of inspectors were instructed to prevent the yacht's departure. The revenue cutter Chandler was placed at their command, and a marshal's officer accombanied them with a warrant to seize the vessel if she attempted to start out of port, and to arrest those found on board.

The Octavia was found at the foot of Van Brunt street, South Brooklyn. The officers thought that they saw preparations for her departure, and they took possession of her. She was searched, and found to have a large supply of coal and stores. No arms or ammunition were discovered. A gray-haired Cuban was in command, and the seamen were all Cubans. They wore stovepipe hats and broadcioth coats. Every few minutes a squad of six or eight well-dressed Cubans marched to the yacht, and after a brief talk with the commander they retired to a shed on the wharf. At the end of an hour nearly one hundred men were congregated under the shed. They dispersed as soon as it was dark. The Chandler kept a surveillance on the vessel all night, and was relieved yesterday morning by the cutter Mosswood, Lieut. Smith, which lay near the Oct.via all day and last night.

The Octavia was built for T. W. Kennard, the engineer who constructed the Atlantic and Great Western Railroad. For several years she lay near Mr. Kennard's late residence at Glen Cove on the Sound, but was sold by him two months ago. Since then she has been fitted up with increased sleeping accommodations, and it has been rumored that she was getting ready to carry an expedition to Cuba. She has a British register, and her owners threaten to appeal to the British Government for redress.

You are aware that during the month the Baitimore and Potonne road reduced its rate to 50 cents for a ticket between Baitimore and Washington, and to 75 cents for the round trip. The Baitimore and Ohio Company decided not to change its rates, which are $1.20 for a single licket and $2 for the round trip.

It is shown that the reduction of revenue from passengers on the Washington branch for the month is only $3,568 as compared with May, 1874. This is a most gratifying illustration of the confidence of the public in the superiority of the Baitimore and Oilo road, and its greater safety with its double track and freedom from accidents for so many years. Unless the board decides to change that action those rates will be maintained. An industration of the comparative economy and moderation of the enumeric company where it exercises a monopoly control, natively the stream of the charge of the property of the immense travel between Initial plan and New Yora, viz. For ninety miles, $3.25 per passenger. This rate presents a striking contrast to the charge of fifty cents for forty-two miles over their Baitimore and Potomac road.

RED TAPE BY THE BUNDLE.

A PROFOUND CONCLUSION OF THE CITY HALL STATESMAN.

The Opulent Society of the New York Hospital making a Munifleent Offer, which the Authorities Decline to Accept—And Why. When the Superintendent of Buildings on the 20th of March last condemned the Park Hospital building as unsafe, the Commissioners of Charities and Correction were obliged to close its doors against all applicants, and to send its sick to Bell-vue Hospital. It has since that time been a mere stopping place for those injured persons whom its ambulances collected in the lower part of the city and took to its doors to be registered, and then transferred te another ambulance to be joited up to Bellevue Hospital. A single bed has been kept ready to receive a dving man, should one be taken in, and the full staff of surgeons, supervising and assistant, have remained to attend the out-door patients who, though living in their own homes, have called for daily treatment. Since the 1st have called for daily treatment. Since the ist of May over one hundred sufferers have been taken in by the hospital's ambulance. Of these a very few have been refused treatment, five have died on the single bed in the only ward, three or four more have been killed while being transported over the rough pavements in ambulances to Bellevue Hospital, and some others have lived only long enough to reach the doors of that institution. The rest have been received there alive, but in many cases greatly reduced by the exhausting trans-fer which they in their weakness were compelled to endure. The Commissioners of Charities asked the Common Council to provide another building, and early in May that body authorized tained an institution on the two blocks bounded by Broadway, Church, Duane, and Worth streets for nearly one hundred vears, and had cared for all persons injured in the lower part of the city. In 1869 the governors were in debt and gave up their work for a time, and then the city established the Park Hospital So it is only a recent institution, begotten in a moment of need. The governors of the New York Hospital leased their large and valuable property, and have accumulated the rents until now they are rich, and have a net income of $100,000 annually. They have begun the erection of a fine new ruilding in Fifteenth street, and have purchased land for parilion hospitals outside of the city. They secured, exemption from taxation from the last Legislature, which relieves them of an annual drain of $38,500, and they are now willing and anxious to resume their old work of caring for the lower wards. They offered to the Mayor so to do, thus relieving the city of one of its buruens, but he refused the profered assistance.

The Cortereal Duel.

The news of this horrible tragedy has afforded certain enemies of Madame Cortereal an opportunity to put in circulation most injurious and we believe most unfounded reports respect ing her life at the time when she still resided in Brooklyn and in this city. Many of these allega-tions we know to be entirely false, and all of them seem inspired by a malignity which cer-tainly ought not to be shown toward one involved in so terrible a calamity. The reporters of sev-eral journals have been made the means of giv-ing wide publicity to such statements, and we deeply regret that some of them have found their way into our own columns.
